good way to extract the juice of beef for an invalid is to broil the beef on a gridiron for a few minutes, and then squeeze the ruice from it with a lemonade squeezer; put a little salt with it. This may be given as the sick one pre-fers, cold or not, or it may be frozen and given in small lumps.—Exchange.

—To avoid liability to crusting with salt the churning should be done at as low a temperature as it will bear; and by reducing the temperature when the butter begins to form to fifty-four or fifty-five degrees the butter will form in fine granules and be in its purest and best condition. Butter should always be churned and gathered in this way to get the best quality. — The Household.

-The relative profit is much greater from a small flock than a large one, says the Rural Home. The grain farmer, no matter how few his acres, can make money by keeping a few sheep. There is always room for them somewhere, and they consume and turn into money food that otherwise would waste. But he must be careful not to overstock.

-For boiled bread pudding, erumb your stale bread into a pudding-pail, cover with sweet milk and set by the stove to warm and soften. Then to every quart of the milk and bread add two well-beaten eggs, half a cupful of sugar and a handful of raisins, or sweet dried fruit of any kind. Do not have your pail full, as it needs some room to rise. Put the cover on tightly, set into boiling water, and do not allow it to stop boiling until it is done.-N. Y. Post.

-Mutton pie makes a welcome dish for the children's dinner; cold roast or broiled mutton should be used for this purpose. Trim off nearly all the fat, cut the clean meet in small pieces and put it in a padding-dish; if you have any gravy or soup stock pour that over it; put in a little butter, and season with pepper and salt, and a little parsley chopped fine; cover the top with a thick paste made just as you make baking-powder biscuits; brown nicely in the oven .- Detroit Post.

-Have horse stables warm enough so that the horse will scarcely ever need a blanket. An earth floor is preferable, but if of wood, have the stalls nearly or quite level, and slatted to keep dry. No rack to draw hay from, but a box or manger of medium height in which to insert his head freely, with tubes from above coming into opposite ends for hay and grain. By all means have the room of good height, well lighted and ventiled, windows in front of stalls if posble, with space wide enough for a walk. horse is cast or victous. - Prairie Farmer.

Perhaps of all the industrial people farmers exhibit the least forethought in regard to their work. The changing of the seasons warn them to be ready to put in this crop or harvest that; but beyond A little skill in these farm operabeyond A little skill in these farm operations, a large proportion of the farmers do not work to the best advantage; and the reason of it is because they do not plan their work previous to its commencement—they have very little method or system, especially about the small things of the farm. If a merchant or a newspaper publisher or a real estate dealer was to be correspondingly heedless in his business, he would become bankrupt in a short time. A constant devising, a shrewd, calculation of the time to be employed in this job or in that, a careful employment of the "slack" days in numerous little import-ant pieces of repairing, hauling, dig-ging, etc., are needed to keep a strong grasp on the farm and not let it get the start of you. The real estate dealer or the average lawyer goes to his office in the morning, attends to his large correspondence, keeps his necessary business engagements (duties as hard in themselves to conduct in an orderly way as are farm operations), and goes home at night unharassed by thoughts of unperformed work that will hinder him in some busy season. It is because they have trained, orderly minds. The farmer may claim that the number of different things on the farm demanding attention is much greater than in any other calling. While this may be disputed, yet even granting it, there yet remains the truth that most farmers do not show an equal amount of administrative ability with the business men of the cities. They may be "chock" full of more hard days work than the city office people. but they can not make the work round up so well, and present so finished an appearance.

Thus how many farmers there are who fail to employ the spare time after corn-husking in attending to such seemingly but by no means unimportant things as mending a harness, repairing a fence or shed, examining the tools and implements, and oiling, painting and mending them if necessary; in looking after the fuel supply for the next year; in digging an ugly-looking stump, or removable and reliable; in many other matters, some of which the

if not attended to theu, may be the outburst of impolite language in the busiest part of the year.

A great mistake lies in supposing that good form management does not require the part of the part and able mind as description that they are not adequately the part of that description that they are not adequately represented for representative halls, and do not seem to wield their proper share of influence. The higher the ideal of agriculture becomes, and it is yearly rising, the more is the fact recognized that it requires no mean order of ability to properly manage a farm. There is room in it for all, and it affords a chance for the development of the higher qualities of the mind.—Lansing Republican.

Compulsory Cremation.

While on the banks of the Seine war waged against the introduction of cremation, the municipal council of Lisbon has passed a resolution by which cremation is made compulsory in times of epidemic, while at ordinary times it is to be optional; the remains of interred bodies, however, are to be burnt every five years. Lisbon, like Paris, suffers from the lack of cemetery accommodation and the proximity of the burialgrounds to populous quarters. Yet the same measure, the introduction of which seems to meet with insurmo: atable obstacles in France, is adopted without any difficulty by Portugal, which is usually supposed to be much less enlightened than her neighbor.—Pall-Mall

The Morning Herald, Baltimore, Md., states: Major B. S. White, of this city, describes his miraculous cure as follows: "I have been a partially dead man for ten years. Doctors attributed my sufferings to the enlargement of certain glands. The quantity of medicine I took without relief would be sufficient to set up a first-class apothecary shop. Finally St. Jacobs Oil was recommended. I had my spinal column thoroughly rubbed with it. All those knots, kinks and stiffness have passed away, and I am myself again."

phy and the Commotion Caused by [Rochester Democrat and Chronicle.] We published in our local columns yesterday morning a significant letter from a gentleman known personally or by reputa-tion to nearly every person in the land. We have received a number of letters pro-testing against the use of our columns for such "palrable frauds and misrepresentations;" therefore, to confirm beyond a doubt the authenticity of the letter, and the genuineness of its sentiments, are porter of this paper was commissioned to ascertain all the possible facts in the matter. Accordingly he visited Clifton Springs, saw the author of the letter, and with the tary of the A.B.C.F. M., Boston, The benevojudges, statesmen, millionaires, journalists, college professors and officials from all parts of the land.

Drawing the morning Democrat and Chronicle from his pocket, the reporter remarked: "Doctor, that letter of yours has created a good deal of talk, and many of our readers have questioned its authen-

"To what do you refer?" remarked the doctor.

The reporter thereupon showed him the letter, which was as tollows:

is a very valuable preparation, I commend it. As its power is manifested under my use, so shall I add to the completeness of my commendation."

"Have you ever analyzed it, dector?"
"We always analyze before we try any preparation of which we do not know the constituents. But analysis, you know, only gives the elements; it does not give the all important proportions. The remarkable power of Warner's Safe Cure undoubtedly consists in the proportions according to which its elements are mixed. While there may be a thousand remedies made of the same elements, unless they are put to gether in proper proportions, they are worthless as kidney and liver preparations. "I hope some day to meet Mr. Warner personally, and extend fuller congratulations to him on the excellence of his pre-parations. I have heard much of him as the founder of the Warner Observatory, and as a man of large benevolence. The reputed high character of the man himself gave assurance to me in the first placethat he would not put a remedy upon the mar-ket that was not trustworthy; and it was a source of a good deal of gratification to me to find out by actual experiment that the remedy itself sustained my impres-sion."

The conclusion reached by Dr. Foster is precisely the same found by Dr. Dio Lewis, Dr. Robert A. Gunn, ex-Surgeon-General Gallagher and others, and proves beyond a doubt, the great efficacy of the remedy which has awakened so much attention in the land and rescued so many men, women and children from disease and death.
